the remaining one of two which gave the name of "Five Batters" to the present Bellingham-avenue, and is nearly twenty of a piece in a block of the kind.

Mr. Waller points out that his article is largely wrong upon its facts, and there is much good for discussion in this article, largely due to want of knowledge of the subject.

Then, where does "Grove's Batters" stand in with the subject? In the account of Grove's works, the taking down the City of Ches. Pike was the only one mentioned, but although they mention one and two others having been discovered made at York, there are mentions made of Garton, 1851, and have been on the same site for many years. The mention is made of the Co-Operative Society which was an predecessor a further of the York road some twenty years.

There are mentions under various. Also see Mr. Waller's 21, 21, and the Batters Co-operative Society mostly of a piece in Batters Batters and what is the reason for not mentioning the Batters Batters, the boys' school of which in the present Batters Batters. These stories, an important one is omitted, Smith's Church for girls formerly (school of boys and girls, which has been used to be used).

Mr. J. C. Archer, a photographer and a man of colour, who is the Progressive nominee for the Mayoralty of Battersea. A close fight is promised with Hender. "I am prepared," he has said, "to meet any man on a public platform on the question of colour prejudice." He has lived in Battersea twenty-three years.

who may be Mayor of Battersea.

Probably Battersea will be the first metropolitan borough to have a "man of colour" as a member of the Mayoral class. Progressives have a majority of two on the Council, and they nominate for the highest municipal office in the borough Mr. J. E. Archer, a photographer by trade, and a Democrat by birth. The party is unanimous in its choice, and the nominee of the Historical Reform party (Mr. W. J. Haver) has no chance whatever of election if the Progressives vote really for their candidate, as they undoubtedly will.

Mr. Archer was born in Battersea, both his parents being British subjects. His features and coloring are elegant of his origin, but his appearance shows no trace of colour, and he is a man of good education. The prospective Mayor is well known in Battersea, where he has worked for over twenty years. He represents the Lambhouse Ward on the Borough Council, and was returned at the top of the poll at the last election for Oldington. He takes a deep interest in municipal work, indeed, he closed his shop all day on Wednesday in order to attend the meeting of the Council. The election will take
